EducationUSA is Here For You!

This time of year, we have been attending many college and job fairs, and we are happy to welcome many new readers to our newsletter. For both new readers and old, we would like to take a moment to refresh your memory on some of the resources at your disposal at the EducationUSA Advising Center. We offer:

- Test preparation workshops for the most common and important tests required for study in the United States (see the list to the right)
- Opportunity to take practice tests for TOEFL, SAT, GRE, etc.
- Library with books and materials available for your college search, test preparation, etc.
- One-on-one appointments to guide you in the college application process.

We hope to see you in our office soon!

News and Resources from Around the Web

Funding Your Education

One of the most common questions we receive from students concerns scholarships and funding questions. World Education Services (WES), most commonly known for foreign credential evaluations, has published a useful Funding Your Education e-guide to help students search and apply for scholarships, complete financial aid documents, and answer college financing questions.

Gaining an Employment Edge

Did you know that studying in another country can help your career prospects? The Institute for International Education has recently published a report detailing the connection between study abroad and career development in the United States based on thousands of survey responses.

Scholarships for Women

October 11th was International Day of the Girl. Did you know that women now comprise more than half of college students in the U.S.? There are many scholarship opportunities available specifically to women, including for STEM fields, business, scholarships for young mothers, diversity scholarships, and sorority funding. U.S. News has compiled a handy list of scholarships for women which can help you to finance your studies.
