Scholarship Opportunity for International Undergraduate Students at Xavier University

Xavier University announces its "International Ambassador Program" for undergraduate students. Each calendar year, up to five new international students are selected on a competitive basis from those who have completed the advanced level of the Intensive English (ESL) Program and enroll as undergraduate students at Xavier.

International Ambassadors receive a reduced tuition rate and participate with faculty or staff mentors in volunteer service on campus, both in and out of the classroom. The students do not work or receive a paycheck, but their service placements ensure that they interact with students, faculty, and other campus staff in meaningful ways. The reduced tuition rate (50%) applies for 8 semesters, or until graduation, whichever comes first. All other school fees and living expenses are the responsibility of the student.

Xavier University, located in Cincinnati, Ohio, is one of 28 Jesuit colleges and Universities in the United States. Students interested in the program should apply to Xavier's intensive English program; applications are accepted for the International Ambassador Program three times per year from among the advanced-level students.

Undergraduate and Graduate: University of Alaska, Anchorage, AK

In order to enhance the diversity of the international student population, University of Alaska Anchorage will offer three one-year tuition waivers to the first three non-sister-city international students to apply and be accepted to UAA for the Fall, 2009 semester with a referral from an EducationUSA advisor. The referral form is attached. It can be returned to Doni M. Williams (see below for contact information) by e-mail, fax, or postal mail after the student has applied and obtained a student identification number. Admission information can be found on the school's International Student Services web site.

The University of Alaska Anchorage is a comprehensive metropolitan university situated in the heart of a vast and magnificent state. Located on the edge of the nation's last great wilderness, UAA is far from remote in the things that matter to students. Innovative programs, a world-class faculty, and a brand new state-of-the art library are just the beginning. Many people think of Alaska in extremes - and they're right!

The summers are extremely stunning, the people are extremely friendly, the winter sports are extremely exhilarating, and the animals are extremely wild! Anchorage, Alaska's largest city, offers the best of what Alaska has to offer, with distinct seasons, great attractions, and rich cultural offerings year round.

UAA offers high quality Associate, Baccalaureate, and Master's level programs, with 100 available undergraduate majors and 28 different programs that lead to a Master's degree, including one of only 14 globally-accredited Project Management programs. Even at non-resident rates, tuition is lower than many other public U.S. universities, and opportunities for on-campus jobs, internships, and optional practical training abound. UAA looks forward to welcoming more international students.

If your center received brochures and admission packets from us last year, you are still on the mailing list. If you didn't receive materials last year, and you would like to in our next mailing (to take place in the next two weeks), please e-mail the contact person and address where the materials should be sent to doni@uaa.alaska.edu.

Please let students know that they still must show complete available resources for one year, to ensure that they can continue after the first academic year if they are awarded a tuition waiver.

Thank you so much for the work you do and we look forward to working further with you!

Friends of Theatre New Talent Award:

This scholarship is given to incoming Freshman Theatre Major(s). This award is the result of the strong and continual community support for the West Georgia Theatre Company over the past ten years. The Theatre Program hopes to both honor the community and provide financial support to a deserving new Theatre student. Students must fill out an application and must audition or show their portfolio to be considered. Auditions and portfolio review dates are scheduled annually at the Georgia Theatre Conference in October and the Georgia Thespian Conference in February. UWG Faculty will participate in scholarship auditions at the Southeastern Theatre Conference in March to view the work of current juniors in High School. Four scholarships are offered for returning students as well.

The Encore Theatre Company Theatre Achievement Scholarships

These scholarships provide financial assistance annually to two declared theatre majors, freshmen or higher, selected by the full time theater faculty. The recipients of the scholarship shall demonstrate talent in the performing arts via and audition or interview, and shall demonstrate continuing dedication to the University's theatre arts program as determined by the theatre faculty. The faculty may also take into consideration, as a secondary matter, the financial need. Encore Theatre Company was a private, independent theater group which was founded in 1997 by four individuals devoted to theatre. Encore was dedicated to quality and professionalism in independent community theatre. Encore disbanded in the 2007, and as its legacy, donated these endowed scholarships to the UWG Theatre Program.
