

School of LAW

presents a general information session on

Globalization and the Legal Profession: Benefits of LL.M. Study in the U.S.

A one-year Master of Laws (LL.M) degree helps strengthen a lawyer's ability to interact with foreign lawyers and companies, or to study a specialized field. It also opens an avenue to take a state bar examination in the U.S. to seek admissions to the bar.

When: Wednesday, March 17, 2010 at 3 pm

Where: Fulbright EducationUSA Advising Center 1082 Budapest, Baross utca 62. First Floor, Room 111.

Featured Speaker: Prof. Jane Schukoske is Director of the Master of Laws Program at the University of Baltimore, Center for International and Comparative Law, Baltimore, Maryland, USA, www.law.ubalt.edu/lotus.

Prof. Schukoske taught at University of Baltimore School of Law from 1988-2000 and served as Executive Director of U.S.-India Educational Foundation from 2000 - 2008. She was an Advisor on the establishment of O.P. Jindal Global University in Sonapat, Haryana, India and now serves on its Governing Body. She has published on international education and community development law issues. She earned her B.A. at Boston University, J.D. at Vanderbilt University, and LL.M. at Georgetown University.

If you have questions about an American LL.M. Program, please join us!
Attendance is free, but advance registration is kindly requested by phone: 462-8050 (limited to 20 participants).

