English Teaching Assistant (ETA) Spotlight Series: Rachel McVey

Hi! My name is Rachel McVey and I will be working with many of you in the coming months as an intern with the Fulbright Advising center. I recently finished my Bachelor's in History at the University of Pittsburgh, with minors in Sociology and Eastern European and Russian Studies. As a student, I held an on-campus job and was involved in several extracurricular activities, including a student run and published community guide and a tutoring program for refugee families. I have a fair bit of experience under my belt to help you navigate the possibilities for study in the US, as my own path in college took many an unexpected turn. At the Fulbright Advising Center you'll find numerous resources about schools, college life, and anything else you need or want to know about. Come talk to me at the Center and together we'll find a program that's right for you!
