ALUMNI ENGAGEMENT INNOVATION FUND – FOUR PROJECTS HAVE BEEN SUBMITTED BY HUNGARIAN STATE ALUMNI

AEIF launched by State Alumni offers alumni of United States government-funded exchange programs the opportunity to address global issues on a local, national, regional or international level.

Four projects have been submitted by Hungarian State Alumni members with a significant participation (above 60) of former Hungarian Fulbrighters. Topics covered are youth health, Hungarian migration and Hungarian American cultural traditions, environmental issues, and self-education in science.

Be Hungarian or American, former or present - Fulbrighters are active in Hungary both professionally and socially. Read about their daily and special activities, learn how they fill in their Fulbright mission.

AN EVENING OF WORDS AND LIBATION

Arlo Voorhees, (left) U.S. Fulbright student to Hungary joined the Pilvax English language magazine as a volunteer.

Encouraging thoughtful analysis, as well as the reading and translation of foreign writers in English, Pilvax Online gives readers an insight about foreign cultures all over the world.

In order to expand the magazine's presence in Hungary Arlo established a monthly reading series.

András Gerevich, (right) former Hungarian Fulbrighter, poet, writer and translator was one of the guest readers at the last event. We consider Arlo's work at Pilvax as a great example of social engagement, bridge building and cooperation among former and present, U.S. and Hungarian Fulbrighters.

MARCH MEETING OF U.S. FULBRIGHTERS

Following a visit to the Village Museum in Ocsa a small town south-east of Budapest, Ellie Parks, a U.S. student grantee hosted the group at the Kodály Institute of Musicology in Kecskemét.

"We are grateful that the Hungarian Fulbright Commission organizes events like this. These "Fulbright Fridays" have given us the opportunity to socialize and interact with Fulbrighters that are scattered all over Hungary. Under normal circumstances, would have little or no contact with those members of the Fulbright community." (Daniel Sender, U.S. Fulbright student)
