Eligibility Requirements

Scholarships

Relative to other business and professional schools, the International Business School offers generous financial aid, in the form of both merit-based and need-based aid. Our major merit-based scholarship programs make awards to nearly one-third of incoming students.

Students do not have to apply separately for financial aid. Every applicant - whether from the US or from other countries - is automatically considered for merit-based scholarships, and every student who completes the Statement of Financial Resources in our application is also considered for need-based awards. Financial aid awards are communicated to the student at the time he or she is admitted.

The School's merit-based financial aid draws on several major scholarship programs:

- Dean's Prize Scholarships offer up to full tuition awards to students of exceptional merit.
- American Leadership Awards recognize outstanding US citizens and residents with scholarships that offset part of tuition costs.
- Global Leadership Awards recognize outstanding candidates of other nationalities with scholarships that offset part of tuition costs.
- The Feld and Scharfman scholarships recognize students with special accomplishments in business, finance and economics with scholarships that offset part of tuition costs.
- Lubin Endowed Scholarship and Fellowship, awarded to students with a specific interest in economic, social, or labor issues.

Our need-based aid program, which provides support to some students not selected for merit awards, considers a combination of financial need and qualifications for professional success. In any given year, the amount of need-based aid is subject to the availability of funds.

General Admission

Admission requirements vary by programs. Generally complete application form with essay, $55 application fee, resume, official GMAT or GRE scores, TOEFL (600 - paper-based, 250 - computer-based) /IELTS scores, official transcripts and three letters of recommendation are needed. Full-Tuition Fellowships from Top Business Schools - More than you may know

Sept. 4th 2008
by Alison Damast

Here's a look at some of the basics about full-tuition scholarships at some of the leading MBA programs.

One of the management education world's greatest secrets is the wide variety of full-tuition fellowship programs at business schools. There are more than you might think—University of Virginia's Darden School of Business, for example, offers 61 full-tuition fellowships—and it is well worth taking the time to look into them during the application process. It could save you a cool $150,000, the average price for a two-year education at a top business school. We've rounded up some of the top schools' full-tuition fellowship programs, along with how to apply for them.

Note from REAC Nancy Keteku: "The Consortium fellowships mentioned in the story (www.cgsm.org) are unfortunately only for US citizens and permanent residents, but it's a wonderful program. EducationUSA Advisors should subscribe to Business Week's newsletter - it's the easiest way I know to learn about MBA admissions, incrementally."
